A_BAF from the secret history of the France-Prussian war diplomacy shows that Austria heartily sympathized with France during the struggle of 1870, but feared the alliance of Russia and Prussia. There is nothing new in this except the official proof of what was unofficially known. It comes in the publication by La Temps, a Paris paper, of the 7th inst. of the lull text of a dispatch from the Austrian Premier, Fon Beust, to Prince Metternich, Austrian Minister at Paris, dated July 1872. Metternich, Austrian Minister at Paris, the friends of equal rights throughout the dated July, 1870, saying: "We consider the cause of France our own, but the allance of Russia and Prussia, prevents the armed intervention of Austria." Von Buest advises Prince Metternich to suggest that the good will of Italy may be gest that the good will of Italy may be repeated the reasons that Judge Hoar growth and the reasons the reasons that Judge Hoar growth and the reasons the reasons that Judge Hoar growth and the reasons the reas gest that the good will of Italy may be gave for believing it to be unconstitution obtained, and the mediation of that gov- si, and his own replies thereto.

The War on the Paracy.—Bismay war against the Pope and the press grows more interesting. The Chancellor, though willing that the newspapers should sustain him in the contest with the Holy See, does not allow them the pressure of the pre any latitude. Even in fighting the Pope they must not go outside of the law. ¡Paul Lindau, the editor of a Berlin weekly fournal, has been sentenced to one bequeathing a sacred legacy to a trusted month's imprisonment for publishing an ally. "For, that was what the great soul did article adjudged to be biaspaemous. In itself the article was silly, and would not thicken around it. In view of the fact have attracted much attention but for the above stated, his request can have no trial of Lindau. It was directed against other significance." trial of Lindau. It was directed against the intallibility of the Pope, and spoke of God as a "boor," and asserted that the world could be governed without the Holy Ghost. The Prussian Roman Catholc: are gratified by the imprisonment of a Protestant editor, a member of their own communion having lately been sent to jail for press offenses.

THE VALUE OF AN IMMIGRANT .- The average value of each immigrant arriving in this country has been frequently esti-mated by writers on political economy, but no two of them agree on this question The value varies from $750, according to the lowest estimate, to about $1,500 in the highest; but in either case it is evi dent that in a more restricted material sense it is cheaper to import our population than it is to produce it ourselves Assuming each child of fifteen to have cost $1,000, and the money thus expend

Plainess of Speech.

The Massachusetts Abolitionists were trained in a rough school. In their single-handed contests with the champions of slavery they never asked for quarter, and never desisted from an attack out o any consideration for the feelings of their adversaries. They were often driven from the platform by rufflans, who thought that the throwing of eggs] at such pestilential agitators was a patriotic duty that ought not to be shirked by conservative citizens; but the flery orators generally managed to say something $5. about the mob leaders that made them uncomfortable for the rest of their lives. It is not surprising that the survivors of this remarkable body of men should never the survivors of bave learned gentleness of speech. Al-Whittier, they are as vindictive a set of old warriors as ever fought with tongue

The contest in the Massachusetts Leg-islature for Mr. Sumner's seat in the United States Senate has thoroughly United States Senate has thoroughly aroused Mr. Garrison, Mr. Redpath and their surviving compatriots, and they are slashing away at the candidates with different actions as the foreign and shall be supported by the state of t ry struggle. Mr. Buffum explained that he had toned down General Bank's tulsone rhetoric; had stricken out "adjective after adjective," and when the vote was taken, had kept his seat. Mr. Garrison reprimends him for not obeying the Apostolic injunction, "having done all, to stand."

all, to stand."

The author of the resolutions is then impaled by a Garrisonian home thrust:
"Perhaps 'a fellow feeling' toward the signer of the Fugitive Slave law may have been awakened in the breast of General Banks by remembering that, as Governor of Massachusetts, he used his official influence, in a messachusetts, he used his official influence, in a messach to the Legislature, to get the Personal Liberty bill either modified or repealed, thus striking down the only safeguard left for the protection of our colored citizens against the prowling kidnappers and slave hunters of the South. And there are some protessed admirers of our departed Senator who are advocating the election of General Banks to fill the vacancy caused by his removal. Is there never to be an end of human inconsistency?"

to fill the vacancy caused by his removal. Is there never to be an end of human inconsistency?"

Mr. James Redpath is a sort of political Ishmaelite, who fights everybody that he don't like, and often says disagreeable things about those who suppose themselves to be his friends. He thinks that there are only three men (among those voted for) who are fit to take Mr. Sumer's place, namely, William Loyd Garrison, Wendell Philips and J. G. Whittier, Mr. Redpath is entirely impartial in his estimate of the candidates representing the factions of Butler and anti-Butler, and neither will be flattered by the following passage in a letter published in the Boston Globe of March 80th: "If the living skeleton of Mr. Barnum had been fired with the umbition to play the part of Falstaff, he would not have needed half so much padding as either Mr. Dawes or Mr. Hoar will need to fill the dead statesman's Neither does Mr. Redouth seems to held the seems of the cost Mr. Redouth seems to held the cost Mr. Redouth seems to held the seems of the cost Mr. Redouth seems to held the cost Mr.

Neither does Mr. Redpath seem to be greatly in love with "the gentleman in politics" about whom we have heard so much of late. One faction in the Massachnastta Legislature is trying to do honor to this typical personation of fine culture, correct habits and honorable birth; but John Brown's historian calls them "inso-lent rabble in broadcloth," and dispose of their candidates in this fashion:
